COLONIAL LIFE IN AMERICA.

Poor Men Now Better Off Than the Rich Were In Those Days.

In his lecture on "Domestic and Social Life Before the Revolution," Dr. Eggleston said that the present generation looked upon the old colonial folk as quite superior to the people of today in many respects. They had the reputation of being larger, braver, more courtly men and purer, more chaste and more beautiful women. They had many virtues, those old colonists, but with them all the world has grown better, more refined, more full of genuine courtesy than in their day. The men are as brave and strong, the women as chaste and beautiful. History records, said the lecturer, the great deeds of the great men of the colonies and the Revolution, but not the ordinary social life of the period. That is only to be learned from many sources, never collected together.

"Man is an historical brute," said Mr. Eggleston, "and must follow his ancestors. The colonists invented little, their utensils, furniture, houses, cooking, etc., being imitations or adaptations of those of the English or the Indian. Necessity is not the mother of invention, but of imitation and adaptation. The man impelled by necessity has no time to invent, therefore he imitates. The houses of the early colonists were mostly of bark, in imitation of those of the Indian. At one time of the 30 houses in New York 29 were of bark. Surely if anything was American the log cabin was, but no, Tacitus describes the Germans as living in log cabins.

"New England was progressive, and yet its people gathered their wood for fuel during the winter before the snow fell, whereas on sleds they could have done it with far more ease, and it was not until about the year 1690 that sleds began to be used in New England. The old fashioned Maryland-Virginia house, with a parlor on one side, dining room on the other and the wide hall running though the house from end to end between them, many of them still standing, was but an imitation of the old double log house—'two pens and a passage'—of the earlier colonists. The furniture of the older colonists of the richer class came mostly from England, and now there are enough old cradles in New England that came over in the Mayflower to fill many such ships. But the furniture of the poorer classes was hewn out of wood, made into rude benches, stools, tables, etc. Carpets being extremely rare in those days, every thrifty housewife had her parlor floor nicely sanded, in which figures were drawn for decoration.

"The very rich colonists ate from gold and silver plates, the middle class from pewter, the lower classes from wooden trenchers, and frequently the food was brought in on nothing but flat wooden blocks. Not until the Revolution was porcelain used to any extent. Forks were not used at all in America until after the first half of the seventeenth century. Coffee and tea were not used in America among the earlier colonists. Milk was not to be found in winter, because no care was taken of the cattle, and the women and children drank cider, birch and root beer, and the like. Everything of corn came from the Indians—the planting of hills, the putting of a fish in each hill for a fertilizer, the cooking of it. The words succotash, pone and hominy are all Indian words. The 'hoecake' was baked by the Indians on hot rocks, by the colonists on a hot hoe—hence its name. Everything was highly flavored."—Baltimore Sun.

All Right For the Uncle.

Fond Mamma—Arabella, I would not wear that opal.

Miss Arabella—Why not?

"It brings bad luck."

"But, mamma, it was a present."

"I know it, child, but that only makes it worse."

"What would you do with it?"

"Well, you might give it to your Uncle Horace."

"But wouldn't it bring him bad luck too?"

"Why—hum—child, he—he has always had bad luck, ever since he was a boy. He has been unlucky in everything. This might change all that. Similia similibus curantur. Send it to your Uncle Horace."—Chicago Tribune.

Peculiar Time Regulations.

Chatham island, lying off the coast of New Zealand, in the south Pacific ocean, is peculiarly situated, as it is one of the few habitable points of the globe where the day of the week changes. It is just on the line of the demarcation between dates. There at 12 noon on Sunday, Sunday ceases, and instantly Monday meridian begins, Sunday comes into a man's house on the east side and becomes Monday by the time it passes out of the western door. A man sits down to his noonday dinner on Sunday, and it is Monday noon before he finishes it.—London Globe.

He Was Truthful.

"Harold," she murmured as her head pressed against his stalwart bosom, "Harold, do I not hear the beating of your fond heart?"

"Not exactly," said Harold, blushing slightly. "I didn't mean to tell you, but you see I'm temporarily obliged to carry one of those $3 watches."—Chicago Record.

GAMBLERS DISLIKE HERRMANN.

His Tricks Are Only Too Well Known to the Green Table Sharps.

"I have had many exciting experiences with card sharps in this country," remarked Herrmann to a reporter. "In the early days the west was the great stamping ground for gamblers, and frequently I have had them invite me into a game on the train. Their scheme was to inveigle some innocent farmer with money into their play and skin him clean. Many times I have interfered to save the poor fellow. Some of the sharpers have recognized me and warned me off more than once. To do so without alarming their intended victim, they would show me a card privately on which was written, 'Mind your own business.' I have won money from those fellows and given it back to the victim.

"Poker stories? Well, I like poker, but I cannot play, because if I win the losers think I am manipulating the cards. I remember one time at Long Branch I fell in with four professional swindlers, who asked me into a $10 limit game. They were clever at shuffling the four aces underneath, and I pretended not to see them cheat, with the result that they soon had $150 of my money. I lost the money with good grace, and stipulated that on the next day we play another game so I could have revenge. They agreed to this willingly enough, for they scented more winnings. But they didn't know I knew what I was talking about when I said I wanted revenge.

"The following day we met about the table again, and this time I stacked the cards and in a way that they could not detect. They lost and I won, to their great surprise. When I had won $500, I got up, and drawing my revolver said: 'Gentlemen, you robbed me yesterday. I have robbed you today. I have recovered my $150. Here is your $350,' and I flung that amount on the table. The gamblers began to bluster, but they saw that they had been beaten at their own game. I backed out of the door, keeping them covered by my pistol, and that was the last I ever heard of them."

Herrmann, therefore, with all his skill at manipulating a euchre deck, is an object of envy to men who make their living by crooked card playing. Many of them have endeavored to persuade him to teach them how to do the tricks and offered him high prices for such tuition, but he prefers to make money more honestly. He readily understood their object and declined to make them any more expert than they were. They did not want to be able to flip a card into the uppermost gallery of a theater as he does, but to deal from the bottom or middle of the deck and shuffle to the disadvantage of the other fellow.

One clever sharper did get the better of the wizard once. It was in Spain. A genteel appearing individual, with the airs of a grandee, came to Herrmann and politely requested him to teach him the card tricks. For $2,000 the magician made him very dexterous with the cards. The following week Herrmann learned that his visitor was a celebrated gambler who had made one fortune in Spain playing with noblemen whom he cheated, another in Cuba, and that he was then contemplating an excursion into France in quest of a third. "That time I was made an innocent party to a swindler's game," said the wizard, laughing. "The fellow disappeared shortly after that, and I never found out what luck he had with the training I gave him."—Chicago Post.

It Certainly Wasn't the Scenery.

Close by the sparkling brook, whose silvery waters danced in the sunlight and rippled over the golden soil, they met in silence—George and Laura—drinking in the glorious beauty of the rustic scene and communing with nature in one of her chosen shrines.

Afar in the west the sun seemed to linger at the horizon's brim as if unwilling to shut out from his gaze the lovely landscape that glowed with a softened and even melancholy radiance in his departing beams. A thrilling, startling cry burst from the lips of the beautiful girl.

"George, George!" she almost shrieked.

"What is it, darling?" he asked, placing his arm round her slender waist. "Has the romantic yet oppressive scenery saddened your spirits?"

"No, George!" she screamed, waving her arms wildly and making a frantic jab at the small of her back. "I think it's some kind of a blessed beetle!"—London Tit-Bits.

Proof.

Mrs. de Jar—Is there an idiot asylum near here?

Mr. de Jar—I believe so.

"Do they take people on their own recommendation?"

"My stars! How should I know? Why?"

"Oh, nothing. Only today I got hold of a package of my old love letters."—London Answers.

Ohio's Coal Capacity.

Professor Edward Orton, an Ohio geologist, has been making a careful study of the coal capacity of that state, and in a recent speech before the Ohio Institute of Mining Engineers stated that, putting the annual demand at 25,000,000 tons, it would take 1,000 years to exhaust Ohio's coalfields.—Philadelphia Press.

On the Possibilities of Sequels.

Balzac had a characteristic idea of writing a sequel to Moliere's "Tartuffe," in order to show how dull the household was after the expulsion of the hypocrite. Moliere himself was not given to sequels, and it is surely no wonder that he left "Tartuffe" alone, seeing what a storm the play roused against him in the religious world. Moliere, however, should have been used to storms.

There had been no small ado after the performance of "L'Ecole des Femmes." To that play Moliere did write a kind of sequel. He made privately among his friends such dramatic fun of his critics that the Abbe Dubuisson suggested that he might make a play of them. And he did. He put his critics on the boards, and "La Critique de l'Ecole des Femmes" ran merrily at the Palais Royal theater for 34 nights. A man named Boursault replied with "Le Portrait du Paintre."

Moliere, at the personal suggestion of Louis XIV, rejoined with "L'Impromptu de Versailles." Not even the interposition of the king put an end to the quarrel, for a certain De Villiers still returned to the attack with "La Vengeance des Marquis." It was a veritable war of sequels. It is perhaps the pleasantest thing that one knows about the grand monarch that, as a boy, he had his ears boxed by Mazarin for reading Scarron's novels on the sly, and that in his maturity he was so good a friend to Moliere.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Doubles of Celebrated Men.

A man came into a club smoking room the other day to whom I bowed cordially. He stared blankly at me for a second, and then looking at me closely said pleasantly:

"This is the second time this has happened to me today. I think you take me for Charles Skinner of the Canadian Pacific."

"I did, but I don't. Now that you speak, I know you're not Mr. Skinner."

After we had been duly introduced he said, with evident earnestness:

"I want to meet Skinner. I want you to take me over to his office if you will. If he is taken for me as often as I am for him, I don't know which of us is doing the other the most harm. My idea is that we ought to compare notes every day."

Everybody about town knows that a cotton broker is the apparent twin of Chauncey M. Depew. A dry goods man used to make up and walk abroad as the late President Arthur. One of the attaches of a Brooklyn hotel is never addressed except as Senator Hill, and President Cleveland has at least four doubles in Hoboken. Only the other night a chubby, smoothly shaven, smiling man was arrested for personating Charley Frohman. Fascinating to speculate on these doubles, isn't it?—New York Press.

Carrying the Banner.

The custom of carrying flags or standards in battle dates back at least to 1490 B. C. We find in Numbers ii, 2, that "Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard with the ensign of his father's house." Each standard of the 12 tribes thus distinguished was supposed to have been of a color to correspond with the stone in Aaron's breastplate which bore the name of that tribe. Under the generic name banner are included many species, such as standard, ensign, pennon, flag, etc. These have been used from earliest times and in all countries to direct movements of troops.

The earliest Roman standard was a bundle of straw fixed to the top of a spear. This was succeeded by figures of animals, such as the horse and the boar, which soon gave place to the eagle, the chief Roman ensign, afterward assumed by the German and French emperors. By every warlike people the banner has been regarded as an emblem of national honor, in defense of which each soldier was at all times ready to die, while banners and flags taken from the enemy have always been special trophies of victory to which places of honor in public buildings have been assigned.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Contentment the Only Specific.

A newspaper reporter the other day asked George G. Shrady, the great American surgeon and physician, the question, "What manner of life do you think most favorable to health?" His reply was:

A moderate life. Take plenty of sleep. Take plenty to eat. Take plenty of exercise. We need more walking philosophers in this world. Keep a contented mind. Remember that the man who wants little is always rich, and the man who has much isn't, always. Sometimes a man owns a house, but sometimes the house owns the man. It is better for the man to own the house and bear in mind that a very big man can live in a very little house. I need not say that little men often live in big houses. This life can only give a man at best one thing—contentment.

Her Age.

She—I have just been reading about the seven ages of men. I wonder how Shakespeare would have described the ages of woman?

He—There would be but two ages of woman.

She—How's that?

He—Sweet 16 and not yet 30.—Detroit Tribune.

SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE.

SONOMA, JUNE 30, 1894.

H. H. GRANICE - - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR

MR. MONT. AKERS, one of Sonoma's oldest and most respected citizens and clerk of the High School Board, gives an explanation in another column of the action taken by the High School Trustees in regard to the attempted purchase of the old College building for school purposes. In reading his communication it will be seen that the State and County Superintendent of Schools, District Attorney Seawell and lawyers Burnett and Ware of Santa Rosa sustain the opinion of the INDEX-TRIBUNE in its assertion that no action can be taken in regard to the proposed purchase without the voice of the people, who if ever given a chance to vote on the proposition will reject by a big majority. The INDEX-TRIBUNE in discussing public matters always does so fearlessly when the interests of the people are at stake, even though it is boycotted by those who take offense at its independence. No malice is ever intended in discussing public questions and the personnel of the editor is cast aside to voice public sentiment, and that is why the INDEX-TRIBUNE has the confidence of its home people. There is no doubt but what the intentions of a majority of the High School Board were honest enough but they were evidently deceived by a schemer. Hence the objections raised by the people and their organ, the local paper of Sonoma Valley.

THE assassination of President Carnot of France by an Italian Anarchist last Sunday evening was a great shock to the people of the United States. The feeling against the assassin and the secret society which selected him to put a good man out of the way is very bitter among Americans, who have not forgotten their martyred Presidents, Abraham Lincoln and General Garfield, who were assassinated by political cranks. In the death of Carnot France looses a great statesman and one of the most illustrious men of modern times. Of course the guillotine will make an example of the assassin, who deserves, if anything a worse fate, but for all that it will not restore to France its distinguished President, who has been cut off in his prime by a poniard in the hands of a vagabond.

EVIDENTLY the Republicans of Butte county do not take kindly to the ticket selected at the late Republican State Convention. The leading Republican paper of that county, the Chico Enterprise, rhymes the convention as follows:

"With rings in their noses and collars on neck,
They follow the boss at a word or a beck.
They are nothing but cattle, the're owned by one man,
But they can't elect Estee, let them do what they can.
They're ready to sneeze when the bosses take snuff,
Send out manifestos or run a big bluff;
But they can't elect Estee in the face of the kick,
Till the ice covers hell a thousand feet thick."

POLITICKS, with a "k," is the title of the latest candidate for political favor in the newspaper field. It is just the publication for those who take an interest in local politics. It is Democratic in principles and we trust will be independent in its expressions regardless of party. It speaks of the Boss of the local Republican party, Mr. Lempkon, but how about the Democratic Boss, Datt Moyle. Politicks is edited by W. C. Kellogg and Tom Gregory, who by the way are the best team of newspaper men in Sonoma county.

THE nomination of Judge J. A. Barham of Santa Rosa for Congressman from this district is a popular one with Republicans. The gentleman is a lawyer of ability. He is said to be a relative of the late martyred President, Abraham Lincoln. He ran for the same office four years ago and it is claimed was honestly elected, but counted out.

THE Supervisors have ordered a county road sprinkler for Santa Rosa road district. It's always a sure thing to bet that the county Board will not order any such improvement for Petaluma, Healdsburg, Sebastopol or Sonoma. Santa Rosa is the only place that pays taxes.—Petaluma Imprint.

Dr. M. J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lewis, Cass county, Iowa, and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. On the 26th of May, while in Des Moines, en route to Chicago, he was suddenly taken with an attack of Diarrhœa. Having sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for the past seventeen years, and knowing its reliability, he procured a 25 cent bottle, two doses of which completely cured him. The excitement and change of water and diet incident to traveling often produce a diarrhœa. Every one should procure a bottle of this remedy before leaving home. For sale by all dealers.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

bylocal applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A New and Beautiful MOUNTAIN RETREAT.

Castle Crags & Mt. Shasta.

Read what the Rev. Dr. J. K. McLean, Pastor of the First Congregational Church, Oakland, says of it:

Hazel Creek, April 14, '94.

* * * I am more than pleased with it—delighted. The place seems to me to embody all available points for a camp—dry, firm soil, good water (the very best), fine chances for drainage, and scenery unsurpassable. The view of Mt. Shasta is one of the very best to be had from any point; it is visible from every part of the ground. The view of the Crags also is fine. The general environment is of the best. It is an oval-shaped amphitheater, three miles long by one-fourth to ¾ of a mile wide, with receding walls two to three thousand feet in height, with lines and shades of beauty at every reach. I doubt if a better place can be found in all Northern California.

The estate consists of a house and lot at Agua Caliente. M. K. Cady, Ed. Steiger and Morris Zoberbier have been appointed appraisers of the estate.

For the most part the wine served on Sonoma Day at the Midwinter Fair was contributed by Mr. Carl Dresel, Mr. C. Aguillon and J. Gundlach & Co., of this valley. The fruit was contributed by Mr. Robt. Hall and Mr. A. D. Lowell of this place. The cake was also contributed by Sonoma ladies.

The dove season opens in this county on August 1st. This means small bags for the local hunter, as by that time the birds will for the most part have winged their flight elsewhere. The Supervisors ought to make the open season a month earlier. Under the present law the birds are fattened at the expense of the farmers of this county and bagged by hunters in some other county. They are mighty scarce hereabouts in August.

An Italian missionary, the Rev. Father Genna, S. J., will conduct the services at St. Francis' Church, to-morrow (Sunday) in the absence of Father Whyte. The Masses will be at 8 and 10:30 o'clock A. An opportunity is especially offered to those not able to speak English to comply with their duty. The Rev. Father will be at their service on Saturday and Sunday at any [illegible] during the day.

DEATH BY DROWNING.

Fate of a Former Resident of Sonoma Valley.

Joseph A. Thierkoff, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thierkoff of Glen Ellen, was drowned in Dead Man's Slough, Merced county, on the 19th inst. The deceased was an old resident of this valley, where his mother, father, brothers and sisters reside. The Los Banos Herald gives the following account of the accident, which cost the young man his life:

Joseph Antone Thierkoff was drowned in Dead Man's Slough, three miles below Dickenson Ferry, at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. He was a native of New York and 37 years of age.

Mr. Thierkoff had been in the employ of Miller & Lux at Canal Farm for some months past, and Monday morning he was sent by Superintendent H. G. Tanner to Merced with a two-seated carriage to get Mrs. M. Lux and her neice and daughter, in spite of the fact that the road was flooded and that danger notices were posted at this end of the road and at Salt Slough. He was told to go to Middle Slough and wait for a young Dane, who would pilot him to the draw-bridge. He met the young man who took him about three miles to the left of the county road and they reached the bridge all right. In Merced the ladies decided not to ride across with him and he started for Los Banos alone at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. At 1:20 he arrived at Dickenson Ferry, where he watered his team, crossed the bridge and continued down the river in the direction that the pilot had brought him the day before. The last time he was seen alive was when he crossed the bridge at 1:20, but as his watch stopped at 1:54, no doubt that was the exact time of his death.

Monday night the dam broke and this made the slough dangerous at the point crossed the day before. At 4 o'clock that afternoon the pilot started for Dickenson Ferry and discovered the top of the carriage sticking out of the slough. He went and informed a man who was plowing near by, who came and rescued one horse and tried to recover the body of Thierkoff, but only succeeded in finding his hat and overcoat and then the pilot went to Canal Farm and told the men. Next morning a number of men were sent from the farm with hooks to drag the stream and about 9 o'clock the body was recovered. The stream was about 120 feet wide the edges being shallow, but in the center for about the width of twenty feet the banks are perpendicular and the water is twelve feet deep, there being a slight current. The team had turned down stream when they went off the bank, the carriage being found about thirty-five feet below where it left the bank. The body was found where the team had plunged in, and bruises on the head indicates that he had been stunned either by the horses or the buggy and that he did not raise to the surface.

The deceased leaves a wife and four young children.

The "Hoss" Editor Secures Another Item.

Last Wednesday morning a three-year-old colt attached to a light sulky belonging to Dr. T. A. Nufer, while tied to a hitching post in front of Dal Pogetto's barber shop on Napa street, became entangled in the rope with which he was tied, and becoming excited plunged madly onto the sidewalk, tipping the cart upside down and snapping the iron hitch post short off. The harness was also more or less damaged, and had it not been for the timely arrival of the owner and several bystanders, who grabbed the terrified animal, it is hard to tell what damage might have been done, as he is of a very excitable nature. A horse belonging to Philip Bill which was tied to a post on the opposite side of the street at the time the rumpus was being created by Dr. Nufer's animal also became frightened and broke loose and went tearing down the street at a frightful rate, but strange to relate, the animal on reaching the bank building at tne corner of Broadway and Napa streets came to a standstill on his own accord, something very unusual in a runaway horse.

Sonoma High School.

Prof. A. C. Abshire, principal of the Sonoma Valley Union High School, received word Monday from the University of California that his school has been placed on the accredited list. Sonoma Valley has reason to feel proud of this announcement as this is the only High School in the county which has been placed on the accredited list at the end of the third year of its existence. Prof. Abshire has been assisted by Miss Georgia Reed of the University for the past year.

High School Problem.

ED. INDEX-TRIBUNE:

After reading the articles published in your paper in regard to buying the college building by the Board of High School Trustees, it might be of some interest to the taxpayers of the Union Districts for me to make a statement of the proceedings of the meeting held June 7th, 1894, which has caused all this High School talk. First—As the Trustees had no permanent place for a school the meeting was called for the purpose of securing a suitable place for the school. Mr. J. B. Morris was summoned before the Board as agent for Dr. G. M. Wells to make a statement to the Board on what time and terms the college building could be leased for. He stated that the property was for sale and not to lease. After some argument Mr. Morris made the following proposition to the Board:

"I will sell to the Sonoma Valley Union High School the property known as the college building on the following terms viz: Six hundred dollars cash, five hundred dollars in 1896, five hundred dollars in 1897, five hundred dollars in 1898, without interest, the High School to pay all taxes.

"Be it further agreed that in the event of it being decided that the Board of Trustees have no warrant in law for purchasing the above building that said Board of Trustees will not be held responsible."

After some argument the following motion was made:

"I move that it be the order of this Board that the old college lot and building at Sonoma be purchased under the terms and agreement presented by the agent of Dr. G. M. Wells, said building to be used for High School purposes."

The motion was unanimously adopted.

A motion was then made instructing the Clerk to communicate with the County Superintendent and the District Attorney in regard to the legality of the law as to the right of the Board to purchase the property, all of which I have done.

I now have the opinion of the State Superintendent, the County Superintendent, the District Attorney and lawyers Burnett and Ware of Santa Rosa. All agree that the Board of Trustees will have to submit the question to a vote of the districts for a tax to buy and build.

I hope this will show that the Board did not try to take any underhanded way to secure a building for the High School. Furthermore the meetings of the School Trustees are public for all to attend.

M. P. AKERS.
District Clerk.

Fourth of July.

The Fourth will be observed in Sonoma with a picnic at Pioneer Grove and a grand ball in the evening at Union Hall. Hon. Robt. Howe will act as President of the Day, Hon. Emmet Seawell will deliver an oration and Robt. A. Poppe will read the declaration of independence. There will be music by the Sonoma Valley Band, reading of a poem by Miss Claire Hope and singing by the choral society.

An Enterprising Agent.

Alonzo de Clairmont, traveling agent and linguist of the Fidelity Mutual Aid Association of San Francisco, who is at present making his headquarters in this city, has written up 72 policies in this valley. The company which he represents furnishes indemnity against loss of time caused by accident or sickness and provides an accidental and natural death benefit at small cost to those who take out a policy. Already a number of people in this valley who were insured in this company have received benefits, which were promptly paid. Mr Clairmont will remain about one week longer in Sonoma, in which time he expects to double the amount of policies he has already issued. See adv. of the company in another column.

The cantata of "Ruth," presented last Tuesday evening at Union Hall for the benefit of the Congregational Church, brought out the people of this valley in large numbers and long before 8 o'clock only standing room was to be had. The well lighted stage was handsomely festooned with trailing vines through which lovely flowers were mingled. Evergreens and hanging boughs lent a rural charm to the surroundings, and when the twenty-four young ladies appeared clad in appropriate costumes the scene was as striking as it was picturesque. The solos and choruses as rendered were well received by the audience. The following were those who took part: Misses Claire Hope, Natalia Haraszthy, Bessie Knight, Pauline Bates, Sadie McHarvey, Clara Cheney, Katie McDonell, Stella Johnson, Lola Haraszthy, Lillie Dunn, Maggie Stevenot, Miss Reinch, Grace Carmer, Mamie Stevenot, Eugenie Berges, Elsie Appleton, Nellie Stevenot, Leonie Stevenot. Mesdames Emparan, Weems, McKennon, Appleton, Burlingame, Mrs. Dr. Davis accompanist. After the programme choice refreshments were on sale at the various booths and from the appearance of the crowd in waiting around the ice cream and strawberry stands these must have reaped a good share of the patronage. Following is the programme as carried out: Brass quartette, "In Spring Time," Messrs. Maxwell, Wilson, Carmer, Johnson; "Ruth," scene 1st, "Time of Famine in Bethlehem;" recitation, "Woman's Rights," Miss Bertha Campbell; "Ruth," scene 2nd, "Naomi, Ruth and Arpah bemoaning their afflictions;" cornet solo, "Parting Song," H. G. Maxwell; "Ruth," scene 3rd, "Plenty Restored in Bethlehem;" recitation, "Guilty or not Guilty," Miss Clara Cheney; "Ruth," scene 4th, "Time of Barley Harvest"; euphonium solo, "Her Bright Smile Haunts me Still," Claude Johnson; "Ruth," scene 5th, "Marriage Feast of Ruth and Boaz."

Royal Baking Powder
ABSOLUTELY PURE

It is all very well to talk about girl friends, brothers or husbands being the best confidantes in the world, but the one who is in reality the only true and sincere sympathizer and listener is one's mother. If you own such a rare and precious gift don't turn aside to pour your woes and your joys into other ears, for life contains no bond so true, no sympathy so ready and hearty as that which binds a mother's heart and soul to the interests of her children. Just as soon as you feel averse to telling your mother all that is in your heart you may rest assured that you are on the wrong track, and the sooner you turn back to the path from which you strayed the pleasanter will be the days, the more blistfully dreamless the nights.

Are you insured? If not, now is the time to provide yourself and family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy as an insurance against any serious results from an attack of bowel complaint during the summer months. It is almost certain to be needed and should be procured at once. No other remedy can take its place or do its work. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, JUNE 30, 1894.

SACRIFICED FOR BEAUTY.

A Pretty Bird Exterminated In Order to Provide Fashion's Adornments.

One of the most beautiful birds known to the ornithologist is the white heron. It is stately, majestic and has a dignity of appearance either in repose or in flight that commands the admiration of the beholder. Ten years ago this superb representative of the feathered tribe was to be found in the swampy regions of southern Indiana and lower California.

In both localities a flight of white herons was a bit of nature's poetry that turned the dull sky of a stormy day into a psalm of praise. Their serene and measured progress dignified the somber heavens like the silent march of a conquering army. They trod the lagoons as the victor sweeps over the wellworn field of battle, for where they chose to make their home they were the masters of the things that swam, of those that crawled and of those that flew. They reigned until fashion claimed them, and then they fled, and as they fled fashion still pursued.

The result will be that before a decade has passed the white heron will rank with the dodo and the great auk as an extinct bird.

What renders certain the extermination of the white heron is the fact that it has a dorsal plume now much in request for the completion of court costumes and for the attire of grand dames the world over who wish to shine at social functions. The dorsal plume is used both as an aigret and as a bonnet adornment. Nothing else can equal its daintiness and elegance. The attempt to supply the demand has been kept up with all the fierceness shown by commerce in seeking profit. The white heron was hunted out of Indiana and California. It fled to Mexico and lower California. Still the seekers for dorsal plumes pursued, and still the great bird sought refuge to the southward. Now it is unknown in North America. Its present habitat is along the Amazon river. Even there it gets no rest, for commerce and fashion still follow on its flight.

In the markets of London and Paris the dorsal plumes are now worth $45 an ounce in gold, and to secure them one New York firm alone has 300 hunters employed along the wide reaches of Brazil's great river. There is a complete equipment, with headquarters at Para. This equipment includes a steam yacht, numerous boats and all the paraphernalia of an expedition into unknown wilds. Seven white men lead the small army. The people under them are natives, who get nominally large pay. However, they accept goods of various sorts for the bulk of their wages and in settlement of account allow $25 for watches that cost their employers $5 in New York. The same ratio prevails in the sale of guns, gaudy silks for the women and other articles of traffic. So the dealers, although their outlay is large, manage to reap an enormous profit on the coveted dorsal plumes.

The haunt of the heron is also that of the alligator and shark, for these dangerous amphibians travel leagues up the broad Amazon. Therefore it often happens that the hunter, in trying to secure his slain prey, falls a victim to the eager man eaters. But the demand for aigrets continues, and probably the peril has something to do with the largeness of the price. "We shall quit the business within five years," said a dealer to The Press representative, "solely for the reason that there will be no more white herons to hunt."—New York Press.

Is This True of Horace Greeley?

"I don't believe in the eccentricities of genius," says an old lady of great observation, "nor in the hobbies which many ride. Horace Greeley was famous in his day for his onslaught on the American weakness for hot breads, which he held up to derision in The Tribune. It made him quite as notorious as his slovenly dress. On one occasion, when he was to deliver a lecture in the village, my husband invited him to spend the night at our house. You can imagine how nervous I was about the supper, and how many healthful dishes I provided. He drew a plate of hot soda biscuits toward him and devoted himself to them. He did not eat another thing. And when he was leaving the room to go to the lecture hall I spied him slyly pulling one trouser leg up so that it would stick upon his boot top in an apparently heedless fashion. He surveyed himself in the glass with as great an effort to be unkempt as most of us expend upon our tidiness."—Philadelphia Press.

Homemade Bread.

Husband—And you made this bread yourself? It is remarkable.

Young Wife—It's real good, isn't it? But it was such a trouble. I had to watch it constantly to keep it from burning.

"Was that the only trouble?"

"Of course. I got the dough from the baker's."—New York Weekly.

Threw His Chance Away.

"Judge, your honor, I didn't steal this man's cornet, indeed I didn't," pleaded the prisoner. "I bought it from him. You know me better than that, judge. I live in the same block with you."

"Oh, you do?" said the judge. "Five years. Call the next case."—Indianapolis Journal.

The Deathwatch.

In the loghouses built by our pioneer forefathers there could often be heard in the night when perfect quiet prevailed a peculiar phenomenon known as the deathwatch. This would be heard somewhere in the wall as one lay in bed and was an exact imitation of the measured ticking of a watch. Tickee, tickee, tickee the sounds would commence, and when perhaps a dozen or 20 ticks had been given there was silence. The ticks might be resumed again, and thus at intervals continue as long as one cared to listen. By many persons this ticking in the night was heard with superstitious dread as betokening or prognosticating death. The sound was really made by a diminutive wood beetle that had burrowed in the log, but whether this peculiar ticking was the result of action involved in perforation or was the mating call or prompted by still other motives has never been made clear.

It is not known that this deathwatch has his habitation in modern home structures, and the creature probably does not perforate into timbers of such small dimensions as form the sides of frame houses. As the sound itself must be near the listener, in the wall near the ear, it would not be heard if in the sills or heavier timbers elsewhere, but it was an ofttime night accompaniment to the wakeful person who listened in the structures that are now no more.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Irrigation In the Garden.

A few years ago my little daughter brought home about 50 verbena plants from 1½ inch pots. They appeared to be worthless and had been given to her by a gardener who was about to throw them away. To gratify the child I planted them in the only place which I could use for that purpose—a shady back yard, trodden hard by the children. I spaded the ground about 18 inches deep, added a little fresh earth and well rotted barnyard manure, making a bed about 7 feet square, with a shallow ditch around it. The plants were watered freely with a sprinkler two evenings and the ditch filled with water at the same time.

The summer was very dry, but no further sprinkling was done until the early frosts came. About once a week the ditch was filled with water and kept filled for an hour. The verbenas soon covered the ground and yielded a profusion of bloom until the plants froze. The effects of light frost were dissipated by free sprinkling with cold water before the sun reached the bed. Is there not a hint in this homely experience for watering by means of open ditches, where costly methods of subirrigation are not practicable?—Garden and Forest.

One Exception.

It used to be told of General Logan, who was a member of congress at the breaking out of the war, that when he saw there was really going to be a fight he seized a musket, slipped out of Washington and walked all the way to Bull Run, where he arrived just in time to have a hand in the fray.

He wore a dress coat, but he stood his ground as long as any one. The rout was complete, and the next morning, a good deal out of breath, he was back at the capital, telling some of his fellow congressmen what he had seen.

"Who gave you this account of the fight?" asked a member from northern New York as he joined the group.

"Why, I was there myself," said Logan.

The New Yorker was mystified. Apparently he had not heard the news.

"You were there?" he exclaimed. "Are the cars running?"

"No," said Logan, "the cars ain't running, but every other thing in the state of Virginia is, as near as I could make out."—Youth's Companion.

An Anecdote of Handel.

On one occasion Handel was caught in a shower of rain, and being unprovided with an umbrella was obliged to seek shelter in a blacksmith's forge. Either Handel was in a silent mood or else the blacksmith showed no conversational symptoms, for in a little while the latter began hammering away at his anvil, accompanying his work with a song. He little thought the use his visitor was making of him and his anvil, for it is said that Handel was listening all the time to the strokes of the hammer on the anvil, which, by producing two harmonic sounds, according in time and tune with the tune the man sang, formed a bass accompaniment. Handel, on reaching home, remembered the air and the hammer accompaniment. He wrote down both, and so we owe to a shower of rain the composition known as "The Harmonious Blacksmith."—London Standard.

The Voracity of Fish.

The voracity of fish is remarkable. A huge pike caught in an English canal is said to have had in its stomach a child's tin toy wagon, a tablespoon, a short Roman sword, probably lost by one of Cæsar's legionaries, a hammer and a baby's flannel shirt. —London Million.

Modern Love.

Enamored Youth—May I hope to find a place in your heart?

Ladylove (fin de siecle)—If you hurry up. There are only a few choice locations left.—London Quiver.
